A BLIGHTING FROST

Has Struck the Presidential Boomlet of Uncle Solon Chase.

A Bad Blow for the Owners of "Them Steers"—Opposition in the Populist Party to His Nomination—The Sage of Chase's Mills Apparently Not In It.

Lewiston, November 5.—It is stated on very good authority that there is a very little prospect of Maine Populists urging the candidacy of Solon Chase, Esq., for the nomination as the Populist party President of our great and glorious republic.

This will be sad news to many outside the Populist party, who, knowing the party's intention of making a Presidential nomination were hoping the honor would be conferred upon the sage of Chase's Mills, Turner, Me.

"To put it briefly," says one of Mr. Chase's best friends, "Uncle Solon is out of it."

Of course, the Cumberland and York county friends of the owner of "Them Steers" may come to the state convention to be held in Auburn this winter and urge his candidacy and it is possible that his boom will pull through. But one thing is very sure, the recent announcement of Mr. Chase as "the most logical candidate in the party," created a big rumormongering among many of the Maine brethren, who have since been diligent in the work of calling in the state boomlet.

It is now considered very doubtful if that meeting between Mr. Chase and members of the party in Maine takes place. It was to be held in Auburn in a few days. Mr. Chase was to be examined as to his political faith, and if agreeable, the gentlemen were to ask him to be the party's national standard bearer. If he consented, State state delegates were to be elected for the national convention.

Those who oppose the candidacy of Mr. Chase make certain charges as to well-remembered political acts, and more especially to matters that came up at the time when the late Hon. James G. Blaine was the Republican nominee for President. This in fact appears to be the chief objection.

Prof. L. C. Bateman of Auburn, editor of the Maine Populist, who came out in an interview endorsing Mr. Chase has the following editorial in this week's issue of the Populist:

"A movement is being made among some of the old time greenbackers of Cumberland and York counties to bring Solon Chase forward as a Presidential candidate. It is proposed that a committee headed by such men as William H. Sargent, John M. Todd and W. H. McLaughlin shall meet Mr. Chase and ask his views on public questions. If his answers are satisfactory, they propose to urge upon the next state convention the feasibility of choosing Chase delegates to the national convention. As we understand the matter this is simply the work of private gentlemen. The people's party as an organization has nothing to do with the movement, and is in no way responsible for the outcome. This being the case we can see no harm from a meeting of the name of the party. It will remain for our state convention to decide what course to adopt in national affairs and what candidate to urge for the highest honors of the party. The date for the proposed meeting has not been fixed, but we hope to be able to announce it in our next issue."

IT GROWS APACE.

The Great Republican Victory is Increasing Hourly.

MAJORITY IN KENTUCKY IS GROWING LARGER.

There is no Question of the Gain of Two U. S. Senators.

POPULISM IN MISSISSIPPI RECEIVES A BAD SET BACK.

There is Only One Rift in the Clouds for Democracy and That Was Clawed Out by the Tiger in New York City—The New Jersey Majority Assuming Proportions of a Land Slide.

Dispatches received during last night only confirm the good news of the result of the elections published yesterday morning.

The victory in Kentucky seems to be assured, and by a substantial majority.

There is no question of the gain of two Republican United States Senators. The majority in New Jersey will reach 22,000.

New York, November 6.—The latest returns show that the next legislature of this state will be: Senate, 7 Republicans; 1 Independent Republican; 9 Tammany; 3 Democrats. A Republican majority of 24.

In the Assembly, 102 Republicans, 27 Tammany, 21 Democrats. Republican majority 54.

The plurality for Palmer for 'Republican secretary of state over King, Dem., given by counties is 89, 877.

AT LEAST 10,000.

Maryland Walks Proudly into the Republican Ranks.

Washington November 6.—There is no doubt that Maryland has gone Republican by at least 10,000, and that a Republican United States Senator will succeed Gibson, who has been merely another voter for Senator Gorman. The Washington Post, which has been the steady supporter of Gorman during the campaign, doubtless expresses the views of the national machine Democrats when it says: "Yesterday's elections resulted in the only way that was or could have been expected by any intelligent observer of events. Since it came into power, nearly three years ago, the Democratic party has done nothing to commend itself to the admiration and confidence of the people, and there was no reason why the people should at this stage of affairs withhold the expression of their distrust and discontent."

"They have had the spectacle of Democratic administration antagonizing and discrediting Democracy leaders in different states; interfering in local politics everywhere, proscribing and persecuting partisans of honorable service and established fealty, and in various other ways encouraging and aiding the Democracy's hereditary enemy. How could it be hoped, much less expected, that an organization thus rent asunder by dissension and enfeebled by the deliberate acts of its appointed chief, should prevail against a compact, harmonious and enthusiastic foe? It was not expected, though loyal Democrats may have hoped against hope, and the result has proven significant and momentous than even the popular and passionate rebuke of 1894."

MEANS GIBSON'S EXIT.

Maryland Legislature Overwhelmingly Republican on Joint Ballot.

Baltimore November 6.—Latest advices show the Democrats will retain control of the state senate but the Republican will have a big majority of the legislature on joint ballot.

The Democrats yesterday elected five and already had nine "hold over" senators and thus have a vote of 14 in a senate of 26 members. The two elected are anti-Gorman Democrats.

The Republicans had three "hold-over" senators and yesterday elected eight. This will give the Republicans 11 votes. One senatorship is still in the balance as Westcott and Pearce both claim Kent county.

Three Democratic senators will vote with the Republicans on all questions of great government.

In the house the Republicans have a total of 68. The Democratic vote in the house will be 23. The Republicans will have 43 majority on joint ballot.

Some Comparisons.

The following table shows the majorities given in these states at important state elections in 1892, 1893 and 1894:

	1892	1893	1894
Iowa	22,955 R.	33,210 R.	79,950 R.
Kentucky	40,020 D.	2,850 D.	2,850 D.
Ohio	1,072 R.	80,905 R.	137,087 R.
Maryland	21,130 D.	18,852 D.	2,690 R.
Penns.	63,747 R.	133,581 R.	241,897 R.
New Jersey	14,974 D.	28,832 R.	48,514 R.

THE CAMPBELL'S ARE GOING.

It Is Expected the Republican Majority in Ohio Will Reach 114,000.

Ohio Will Have Two U. S. Senators who Are Republicans at Once—This Has Only Happened Once for a Brief Time, Since the War.

Columbus, Ohio, November 6.—The Republican victory in Ohio is still growing.

This afternoon Chairman Kurtz of the state Republican committee claimed 114,000 plurality for Bushnell and a majority on joint ballot in the legislature of 87.

The house, he said, will contain 88 Republicans and 22 Democrats with two members yet in doubt. The senate will contain 30 Republicans and six Democrats and one member still in doubt.

It is generally conceded that the result of this election placed Gov. McKinley on solid ground in Ohio, for the support for the Presidency next year. The result shows that he and his friends loyally supported the Foraker faction, and governor will receive the earnest support of the Foraker faction next year.

The state of Ohio will soon have two Republican senators at the same time which has not happened before since the war except for a brief space from 1865 to 1869 when Ben Wade and John Sherman held seats together in the upper branch of Congress.

PROMINENT ACTRESS DEAD.

Mrs. D. P. Bowers Dies Suddenly in Washington of Pneumonia.

Washington, November 6.—Mrs. D. P. Bowers, the well known actress, died at 4:30 this morning at the residence of Frank V. Bennett, manager of the Arlington hotel, her son-in-law, with whom she has made her home in late years. She was taken sick Friday morning, and was not considered dangerous, until yesterday, when pneumonia speedily developed and death ensued.

Mrs. Bowers' maiden name was Elizabeth Crocker. She was born at Stamford, Conn., March 12, 1830. She was the daughter of an Episcopal clergyman, who died in her early childhood. Her sister, afterwards Mrs. F. B. Conway, like herself, took to the stage, and also like her, became one of the foremost of American actresses. Mrs. Bowers' first appearance was at the Park theatre, New York, at the age of sixteen years. She met, and in 1847 married D. P. Bowers, who died in 1878. She lived in New York Mr. and Mrs. Bowers were very popular. They always considered that the construction of the Cape Cod railway, which was under way, was a matter of great importance. Mrs. Bowers died at 4:30 this morning. She was buried in Philadelphia by the side of her first husband.

She Was smart.

The new clerk was decidedly pretty—at least so said the employees of a well known Market street firm, and they immediately began to speculate as to her age, at the same time marveling at the new departure of the firm, who was engaged the plainest young woman he could find. It was a fact at this establishment to speculate on a new woman's age, the more so as there was a quiet way of finding it out. Every clerk was required to join the Employees' Beneficial association, and membership was not given until the clerk was filled out. Accordingly when the new clerk had prepared her blank the older hands sought an opportunity to confer with the secretary, to whom the membership slip was intrusted, in order to learn the age of the new clerk. The secretary was loath to part with the important document in his possession when interviewed at dinner hour, but after being bribed with cigars he finally handed the slip to the speculators. What they read was, "Age, 18 plus." And now they are wondering if it is the largest portion of the number.

GORHAM MUST WAIT.

Gongs of Rushing Electrics Will Not Disturb the Peace.

COMMISSIONERS BLOCK THE BOOMSTICK TRAINS.

They Decide That Public Convenience Does Not Require Them—The Pleasant-Crossing—Other Augusta News—The Rate of Wages in Maine.

[SPECIAL TO THE PRESS.]

Augusta, November 6.—The railroad commissioners were in session here today and transacted considerable business. They settled the long-pending question of the proposed electric road to Gorham, and they settled it by deciding that the public convenience does not require the building of the road. The Westbrook and Gorham Company has a corporate existence, for the question formerly before the commission, was the approval of the articles of association and these were approved. In building a railway under the general law there are two steps to be taken. The first is the formation of the company and the approval of the articles of association by the commission as was done in this case. The second is the adoption of the location or route which must also be approved. The commissioners say they have no authority to stop the formation of the corporations. Their power in that case is limited to seeing that the law is observed. But when it comes to the location, they can refuse their sanction on the ground that public convenience does not require it, or for other sufficient reason. So on the question of the approval of the location, hinges the fate of the railway company. In the Gorham matter, this question was not formally before the commission, but as the matter of the new line was gone over at the hearing in Portland and then exhaustively discussed, the commission append to the approval of the articles of association, certain memoranda stating why they would not approve the location of the proposed road. So the boomstick trains will not run to Gorham just yet.

Another matter of interest in Portland was considered by the commission today. When the crossing of the Cape electric railway and the Boston & Maine railroad at Pleasantland was approved by the commission it was decided that each corporation should pay half the expense of maintaining the ball signal at the crossing. This financial arrangement was made as a temporary expedient, but the hearing of the corporations in regard to it. Today Hon. Joseph W. Symonds representing the Boston & Maine, and Messrs. H. H. Kutz, representing the Cape road, appeared before the commission. Each side claimed that the other should pay all the bills. The commissioners will compromise on this. They will leave the matter just as it stands now, each company paying half.

The commissioners approved several highway crossings and a slight change of location on the Ashland branch of the Bangor & Aroostook.

The following is a memorandum in the Gorham matter.

"While the only question which we can legally settle in this proceeding is whether or not the proposed electric road of the Cape road, under the general law of 1882, is a public convenience, the question whether public convenience requires the construction of the proposed electric railroad from Westbrook to Gorham, is a question of fact, and we are not authorized to decide upon it. We have, however, introduced relating thereto, our own views, and we have, because a decision here cannot have the force of one regularly made, but because we have felt great doubt about the propriety of making such a decision, we have introduced this question can be only legally before us upon petition for approval of location. But while we deem it the best practice ordinarily, we deem it the best practice to introduce this question, we have reluctantly consented to consider this matter now, such being the desire of both parties.

Under chapter 283 of the Laws of 1882 there was practically no limitation upon construction of electric railroads; but a change was made by the Public Laws of 1885, chapter 84, and the statute which authorizes the railroad commissioners to grant franchise for an electric railroad, limits that authority to cases where "public convenience requires the construction of such road." This language in this respect is identical with the statute which authorizes the building of steam railroads under the general law of 1836. The chief matter in dispute is whether or not the proposed electric road is a public convenience. The commissioners find that public convenience requires it.

"If this 'public convenience' in the law of 1885 means the same 'public convenience' as that which authorized the building of a steam railroad, can we say that there is any such demand for the construction of this railroad? The commissioners find that there is no such demand for the construction of this railroad. We find that while there are six passenger trains each way between Gorham and Portland, the actual gross receipts for the year ending June 3, 1895, averaged only two dollars and two one-thousandths of a cent per passenger. This does not show any great demand for increased facilities. If it is suggested that the fares are too high, or that the trains are not run to accommodate the passengers, the statute provides a better way of curing the evil than by inviting competition.

"But it is urged by the petitioners that the electric railroad naturally accommodates a different class of travellers from that accommodated by the steam railroad; that an electric railroad receives passengers only, and not from southern villages, being therefore more convenient than steam railroads, which takes passengers only at their regular stations. This is a strong argument, and we are inclined to observe and experience. There are, however, very few dwellings between Gorham and Westbrook, and we fail to see why the electric road is necessary. It is reported to have beaten the station of the Portland & Rochester railroad as to the terminus of the proposed electric road.

"The proposed electric railroad, under the general law, has the right to carry property as well as persons; and while the petitioners at present intend to carry passengers only, there is nothing to prevent their also carrying freight. They wish to do so.

A Menace to Mariners.

Boston, November 6.—The owner of the brig Stacy Clark, driven ashore at Cardiff, during a hurricane, October 21, received a cablegram today stating that the vessel was successfully floated and not seriously damaged. The chief matter in dispute is whether or not the proposed electric road is a public convenience. The commissioners find that public convenience requires it.

Strike Feared.

Middletown, Conn., November 6.—Trouble is feared tonight in the Portland quarries from strikes and extra watchmen have been put on duty. Matters are no nearer a settlement than when the men refused all offers and called off the few who went to work Tuesday.

The trouble arose over the winter schedule of rates and the time of going into effect, one month earlier than usual. The new rates allow seven hours' work on days when weather permits, at 14 cents an hour.

Populism Dead in Mississippi.

Jackson, Miss., November 6.—Chairman Williams of the state executive committee says that Burklism and Populism are a dead letter in his state. McLaurin, the Democratic candidate for governor, is reported to have beaten Burklism in his home county (Chickasaw). The Democratic majority in the state is probably 50,000.

"We have endeavored to judge of public convenience in the way intended by the statute, with reference to existing facilities for travel, and to those which may fairly be required in the immediate future.

"Our conclusion, after a full and careful examination and consideration of the subject, is that public convenience does not, at the present time, require the construction of this proposed electric railroad."

Labor Commissioner Matthews in his annual report will include some figures in relation to the rates of wages and the cost of living in Maine which are of especial interest at this time, as showing the degree in which the recent period of business depression still makes itself felt. The labor bureau printed similar statistics several years ago and the figures gathered this year show that wages are, on an average, ten per cent lower now than then. There has been a corresponding reduction in living expenses, due to the necessity of economy. The report of the bureau will also include statistics as to the dairy industry in Maine and will take up a number of other topics.

Interest in the gubernatorial campaign has been undergoing somewhat of a revival lately owing to the report that Mr. Powers had made a capture from the ranks of his opponents by converting Hon. S. W. Matthews. Mr. Matthews said today that he is now as he has been, and will continue to be, a firm supporter of Mr. Hill.

ANOTHER FATALITY.

Fire in Brooklyn Early This Morning Causes the Loss of Six Lives.

New York, November 7.—A family of six persons were burned to death in a tenement house fire at 311 Van Brunt street, Brooklyn, shortly after 1 o'clock this morning.

The dead are Charles Ryan and his wife Klein and their four daughters, John Anna, aged 20, Sarah, aged 17, Maggie, aged 14, and Lizzie, aged 13. The cause of the fire is not known, but indications are that it may have been started by the explosion of a kerosene lamp.

THE POWERS TO THE PORTE.

They Express Themselves in No Unmeasured Terms at Constantinople.

Constantinople, November 6.—Ambassadors of the great powers in representations to the Porte yesterday, urged the adoption of adequate measures to bring the restoration of order in various parts of Turkey, where there are constantly occurring disturbances to the detriment of Christians of all nations, falling which, the powers would decide in concert what steps should be taken, and made reference to the circumstances of the intervention of the powers in Syria at the time of the massacres there in 1860.

The consular reports received at Constantinople in connection with the Diarbekir disturbances, describe the Kurds as having been commanded by the Sheik of Zeelen, who was implicated in the massacres, before the Kurds, under the command of the Sheik, it is alleged, entered the town and immediately began an indiscriminate massacre of the Christians, pillaging, and burning the Christian quarters. The Catholic and Armenian bishops at Diarbekir, made a hasty escape, the reports say, and the French consul was in imminent danger.

THEY ESCAPED.

Three Swindlers Escaped From the Clutches of the Law at Keene.

Keene, N. H., November 6.—G. E. Hager and wife of New York and G. E. Howard of Chicago were the names given by a trio of swindlers who have been trying to work the doctors of this city as the supposed agents of the "Eureka Collecting Agency." The plan proposed was to admit physicians to life memberships for $15 each. Two or three signatures were obtained on the condition that all the physicians agreed to it. Contracts were produced signed by 11 physicians. The next victim was suspicious and investigated, finding 10 of the 11 signatures very cleverly forged.

All three swindlers were captured late last night at the City Hotel. They were locked in a room in charge of a porter, but while the officer went for assistance the birds flew.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 7.

Hereafter it won't be necessary for Calvin S. Brice to make even a pretence of living in Ohio.

The Republicans gain at least two Senators, one in Maryland and one in Ohio, with some prospect of another in Kentucky and two in Utah.

Campbell's friends have thus early begun to accuse Brice of knifing their favorite, and there is going to be a good deal of dirty Democratic linen washed in Ohio in the next few weeks.

We imagine that Tuesday's elections will have the effect to greatly diminish the eagerness of the pursuit of the Democratic Presidential nomination. Hereafter it will be a question of who will take it, not of who want it. Nobody will want it.

The result in Kentucky is a very bad defeat for free silver coinage. It was the defection of the Democrats who oppose that policy that beat Hardin who went into the campaign as an avowed supporter of free silver. Whether Blackburn has had any better luck than Hardin remains to be seen, but both were in the same boat and the chances are that both went over the falls together.

Gorman seems to have met his Waterloo at last. He appears to have lost every thing in Maryland. It will be a killing blow to him because bosses of his type are dependent for their prestige on success. When the "boys" discover that they can give them nothing their zeal cools very rapidly. Of course the bolt of the Cleveland Democrat was an important factor in his defeat, but the tide has been setting for some years back in Maryland towards the Republicans and the bolt probably only hastened the inevitable.

The increased plurality for Gov. Greenhalge is one of the most gratifying features of the election. A determined attempt was made by a faction to rebuke him because he would not give any countenance to its scheme of ostracizing people on account of their religion. Had it succeeded it would have been distinct public injury because it would have given the faction a standing and power in political matters which no association organized for such a purpose ought to get, and would have tended to crush the spirit of independence in officials which ought to be encouraged rather than rebuked. The A. P. A. association made a very bad mistake in going into the Massachusetts campaign as an organization. It accomplished nothing, and it prejudiced a great many people against it who were believers in its salutary principles and would have been inclined to assist it in legitimate ways.

The Good Government ticket polled but a thousand votes in New York, so the secret of Tammany's triumph must be looked for outside of that. Perhaps when the votes are tabulated so that they can be analyzed some clear light will be thrown upon the matter. Probably, however, it is a case of the pendulum swinging back again. Spasmodic effort such as the uprising against Tammany last year was essentially is almost always succeeded by apathy. Then, too, the desire for Sunday beer detached a good many voters from the anti-Tammany ranks. There is one consolation about the result, however; it brings to Tammany no practical power. The city is still in the control of the reform element, and the thirty devotees of beer have still to reckon with Commissioner Roosevelt and a Republican legislature made up very largely of men from the rural districts, to whom the need of beer on Sundays is foreign.

THE ELECTIONS.

The most striking feature of the elections is the failure of the Democratic revival, which we have been hearing so much about, to materialize. Two years ago and a year ago when the Republicans swept the Northern States by tremendous majorities the Democrats consoled themselves with the belief that Republican successes were temporary affairs, born of a transient wave of disgust and dis-gruntlement that was passing over the country, and that with reviving business and better times the votes of the two parties would come pretty near together again. But the results of yesterday dispel all probability of the realization of this hope in the near future. Nowhere except in New York city are there any indications whatever of a Democratic revival, and there the apparent revival is not so much a revival of the Democracy as the determined uprising of people who want beer on Sunday afternoon. In the state Democracy it is at as low an ebb as it was a year ago. Over in New Jersey there was a Democratic slump instead of a revival, which gives the Republicans complete control of the state, something that has not been known for a score of years. But Ohio furnished the best and most conclusive evidence that there has been no turn in the tide. In the case of New York the result could be attributed, with some plausibility, to apathy. There was little campaigning outside of the cities, and there local issues were paramount. In the case of New Jersey it could be said that the scandalous conduct of the last Democratic legislature was a potent factor in the Democratic overthrow. But neither explanation is applicable to Ohio. There was the liveliest campaign in that state that it has seen for many a year. The Democrats had at the head of their ticket their most popular and powerful leader, and he made a campaign which for vigor and skill has rarely been equaled. They also had the benefit of Senator Brice's millions, and of all the influence that the national administration could exert. Local issues and national issues figured in the canvass; there were rallies galore; and the thoroughness of the stirring up is shown by the fact that the total vote of the state was larger than ever before. That under these circumstances the Republican majority should equal McKinley's phenomenal majority of two years ago shows that whatever revival of business there may have been has had no effect to revive the Democratic party. Iowa too furnishes an excellent demonstration of the same fact. The Republican candidate for governor in that state was not very popular and he had some entangling railroad alliances that tended to hurt him; and the perplexing question of prohibition figured in the campaign. Nevertheless the Republican majority will be about the same as two years ago. A great many Democrats appear to have deserted their own party and voted the Populist ticket for the Populist vote has largely increased and the Democratic fallen off. The result in those two states make it impossible for the Democrats to deny that the tide is setting against them just as strongly as a year ago and forbid them to entertain the hope that there will be any change next year that will give them the slightest chance of electing President. Indeed it was practically settled by the elections of Tuesday that the next President is to be a Republican.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

ESTES and LAURIAT'S HOLIDAY PUBLICATIONS.

The books of this publishing house include sets of standard works, holiday editions, and juveniles and at this season of the year offer a tempting array to Christmas purchasers. Scott's Rob Roy appears in two volumes, bound in ornate cloth, of olive green with white and gold decoration, slip covers and boxed. Choice paper and print, illustrations in photo-etching and photogravure and a bit of green satin by way of book mark, complete the outward garb of these handsome volumes. Rob Roy stands, with Ivanhoe, first among the Waverleys, in the group included under romantic fiction. Perhaps Scott's finest achievement is where he deals with the people nearest him, in his own environment and makes story of history, as with Effie Deane; but "Rob Roy" was always enchanting and what valiant heart but beats the quicker at this moment for thoughts of the McGregors, Jeanie Mac Alpine, Rashleigh, and most of all the ever dashing and fascinating Di Vernon. For young people to meet the Waverleys in ownership, in this delightful guise must be really the painted lily and gilded gold.

Twelve original etchings, some of them by R. W. Macbette, A. R. A., and reproductions of two etchings by George Cruikshank are included, all printed on imperial Japanese paper. Mr. Andrew Lang furnishes a full introduction to the work (Loring, Short & Harmon. Price, $6.00. Ideal Gift Book Series.)

Under this same classification, the "Ideal Gift Book," comes "Constantinople. The City of the Sultans" by Clara Eschke Clement whose "Naples," last year met so warm a reception and whose "Legendary and Mythological Art" is a standard work. Mrs. Clement has but recently returned from travels in eastern countries. She was never more active in gathering and arranging material for her books. "Constantinople" is like its predecessor, richly bound and lavishly illustrated in Photogravure. Turkey is less well known than Italy, and its modern development is most interesting. The early part of the book takes up historic periods, the latter, customs, manners, religions and social observances. (Loring, Short & Harmon. Price $3.00.)

"Schoolboy Days in Japan" by Andre Laurie, translated by Laura E. Kendall, illustrated, belongs to the "College Life or School Life in all Countries Series." The Japanese race and civilization are just now absorbing much attention. A literature about Japan has of late sprung up as it were in a twinkling; largely upon modern opinions or notes formed and collected by travelers and observers, English and American. This book for young people has some unusual features which at least render it peculiar and novel. The illustrations for instance are extraordinary and not very attractive we must admit, yet certainly foreign enough to satisfy readers who are tired of reproductions on the old lines.

A French scientist, M. Duplay, is sent on a mission to the Orient. He takes with him his wife and children, their maid, a Gascon valet, and a native guide, so that we have in the narrative ample material for the harvesting of all sorts of experiences and observations from different points of view. Information and entertainment are well mingled and some scenes of school and home are here detailed not to be found in other sketches. Original designs, in illustrating, by Felix Regamey. (Loring, Short & Harmon. Price $1.50.)

Four volumes are at hand of "Stories of American History" by James Otis, that most popular writer of juvenile literature. They are respectively, "An Island Refugee," "Ezra Jordan's Escape," "The Boys of 1745" and "Neal the Miller." They are rather thin volumes, 8 inches by 5 1-2 and of excellent type, paper and illustration.

Nothing can be better for our young folks than the spirited setting forth of incidents in American history. Material for it is exhaustless and when well handled, as in the present case, and rendered lively and wide-awake, such tales never fail to inspire young readers. "An Island Refugee" has as sub-heading "Casco Bay in 1676" and that seems to come pretty near home. We recommend these stories heartily. (Loring, Short & Harmon.)

Jerry's Family, by the same author, James Otis, author of Toby Tyler, Jennie Wren, etc., is a story of a street waif of New York, and is illustrated by George Foster Barnes. It gives the history of a small boy with the biggest and warmest of hearts, who gathers in a mother and "kid" more oppressed and alone than he. The new home, its vicissitudes, a final happy outcome, albeit poor Jerry suffers in a way never to be wholly made up to him, and the memory of the golden rule are the substance and outcome of the story. Much argot, a good many hand-to-hand skirmishes, and the realistic side of street life generally are here introduced. The pictures have character, and plenty of movement. (Loring, Short & Harmon.)

Nautilus by Laura E. Richards author of Captain January, etc., illustrated, is a bewitching piece of imaginative work. It isn't very probable, and we doubt rather whether, like many of Mrs. Ewing's books about children, it might not beguile the hearts of adults more thoroughly than those of little folks; and yet it is not always easy to tell, for it may be that the foreign captain and the entrancingly rare and beautiful sea shells and quite carry away the twelve year old.

Anent the parlor little John says "I guess its a fine room, sir; and that if a person didn't like it, and that's the outdoors, you know, and that's never shut up." "True," cried the Skipper with a merry laugh, "out of doors is never shut up, praise be to Heaven!" "Nautilus" is decked with a bounding oar design very effective and artistic; and it is a story worthy to stand with Mrs. Richards's best, which is high praise. (Loring, Short & Harmon. Price 75 cents.)

This author's "Melody" is also brought out this fall in an illustrated holiday edition, bound in green, silver and gold, with half-tone pictures from drawings by Frank T. Merrill. Calendered paper and new large type. We have here, too, an exquisite bit of mingled humor and pathos. The dedication leads one to the eyes that see not of dear little Melody, while Miss Vesta and Miss Rejoice, the Doctor and the old fiddler, once known are not lightly remembered.

She "sings like an angel," said Dr. Anthony, "like an angel from Heaven." "She has a right to, sir," said Miss Vesta gravely, "she is a child of God, who has never forgotten her Father." (Loring, Short & Harmon. Price $1.25.)

Round the Yule-Log. Christmas in Norway by P. Chr. Asbjornsen, translated by H. L. Brockstam and illustrated by L. J. Bridgman, follows France, England, Italy and Germany in the series "Christmas in Many Lands." It is hardly in text the sort of sketch to attract our children yet it is quaint and characteristic and deserves its place in Xmas tales of different nationalities. Norwegian folk and fairy tales are here woven into the story and the brownies drawn in picture and verbally described are very prevalent and sometimes do things fitted to make curly hair or straight locks stand on end just ever so little, you know! (Loring, Short & Harmon. Price 50 cents.)

Ruby's Vacation. The Fourth volume of the Ruby Series by Minnie E. Paul, author of Ruby and Rutley, etc. It is a lamentable fact that the reviewer of big volumes grows somewhat away from little ones and that the perusal of stupid works on science and art will spoil a really fresh taste for the ecstasy of Prudy and Susie and Doty Dimple. So that this taster of literary wares picked out a "Ruby" story and tried it on a little maiden of eight years. The little maiden read it without ever winking. She pronounced it "perfectly splendid!" She wishes to know when another volume would follow and when like Oliver she could have more. This stands as excellent criticism and "Ruby's Vacation" for Infants and Children.

CASTORIA

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher.

That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

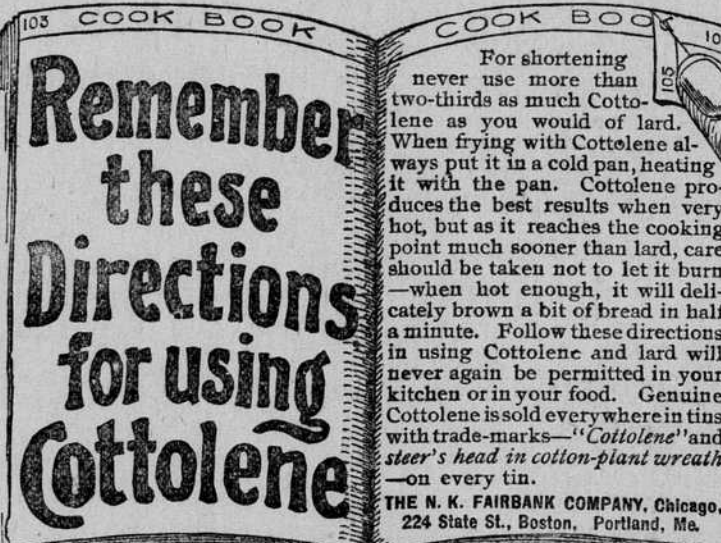

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Dr. H. Pitcher is on every wrapper.

Remember these Directions for using Cottolene

For shortening never use more than two-thirds as much Cottolene as you would of lard. When frying with Cottolene always put it in a cold pan, heating it with the pan. Cottolene produces the best results when very hot, but as it reaches the cooking point much sooner than lard, care should be taken not to let it burn—when hot enough, it will delicately brown a bit of bread in half a minute. Follow these directions in using Cottolene and lard will never again be permitted in your kitchen or in your food. Genuine Cottolene is sold everywhere in this trade-mark—"Cottolene" and "steer's head in cotton-plant wreath" on every tin.

THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY, Chicago, 224 State St., Boston, Portland, Me.

is offered to the very young public with perfect confidence in the happiness it is sure to bestow; for it tells every atom there is to tell of just how things came about in the attic and play-room, and what went on at school and in vacation with surprises, fairs, visits and other exciting events. (Loring, Short & Harmon.)

Not unlike the above, is "Cricket" by Elizabeth Westyn Timlow, illustrated by Harriet R. Richards. The very first picture of a little girl lying before the open fire, face down, propped on two elbows, is enough to make one want to read the whole story and when it is read, it remains with one as a sparkling and pretty recital of all sorts of lively doings. There are blackberries and makings of ice cream and catching of minnows and celebrations of July fourth, and some very cunning kittens in the story and we are sure that Mamie and Zaidie and Helen and Eunice and Maudie and Kenneth will make many friends. (Loring, Short & Harmon.)

Chatterbox for 1895 needs no announcement. It comes at $1.25 and in better form at $1.75. It is "crum" full of pictures, songs, story and puzzles. There is a great deal to it and a child armed with this volume feels he has a feast before him. (Loring, Short & Harmon.)

BROUGHT HIM TO TIME.

Brief Note That Brought a Long Winded Speaker to a Full Stop.

Henry Watterson tells this story of Hon. B. Lawless, a former member of the Louisville bar, and who came from Glasgow, Ky. He was a "long-winded" talker, and when he arose to make an argument did not know when to stop. On one occasion he was making a speech before Judge Ballard, in the United States Court. He had spoken several hours, and the Judge and everyone else were thoroughly tired out, though they were helpless.

At last Judge Ballard beckoned his brother, Jack Ballard, to him and implored him to stop Lawless, if he could. "Oh, that's easy enough," replied the brother. "I'll stop him inside of three minutes."

There was a great deal of curiosity to see how this could be accomplished, as the orator seemed to be nowhere near the end of his speech. Jack Ballard took a pencil and a sheet of paper and wrote:

"My Dear Colonel: As soon as you finish your magnificent argument I would like you to join me to see Lillian Kennedy in 'A Midnight Frolic.'"

The note was handed to the orator who paused at the end of a soaring period, drew his glasses from his pocket and read the note. He put it in his pocket and said:

"And now, if it pleases your honor, and you, gentlemen of the jury, I leave the case with you."

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

Katherine Robber.

Yesterday afternoon Katherine Robber and her company appeared to a delighted and crowded audience in "Moths." In the evening a sort of mixture of melodrama and mixture under the name of "The Clipper" was presented to a large house. The story deals with the career of a smart New York girl, who knows the methods and intentions of the bad men and women introduced in the plot, and with the aid of a villainous companion thwarts all the villainous schemes, and is finally restored to her parents, from whom she has for a long time been separated by the unprincipled schemer. Miss Robber is particularly happy in character like that of the Clipper, the bright, smart, quick-witted girl who is never at a loss for an apt word or an opportune movement. She dressed the part well, and the curtain was called several times owing to the enthusiasm of the audience. She was well supported. This afternoon "Our Kitty" will be given again, and tonight "A Heroine in Rags" will be presented.

Rossini Club.

Associate members of the Rossini Club are reminded of the beginning of the season. They will meet every Thursday morning at 11 o'clock at Kotschmar hall.

The Stockbridge Course.

November 21st Padewski will open the Stockbridge course and will also give a matinee the next afternoon. Monday night he made his first appearance in New York this season and the Herald says:

"Long hair or short hair, Padewski is still the ideal of the hour! And deservedly so! No other artist living could have done what he did at Carnegie Hall last evening, when, after an absence which to many of us seemed much longer than it really was, he made his first reappearance. For, think of a programme consisting practically of nothing but three long piano concertos! Even the hardened concert goer and the recital hall witness before the concert began. And yet, what was the result? That the entire audience remained spellbound and refused to clear the hall long after Mr. Padewski had added a last rhapsody and one of Schumann's Nachtsuecke to the original scheme.

Let no one after the hysterical scenes that were witnessed last evening let the words "crazy" or "fad" in connection with Ignace Jean Padewski. In his own way he is the greatest artist of our time. You wonder how it was possible for this frail, pale, sickly looking man to have so much demoniacal power. Only once did I feel a similar sensation. It was Duse's second act in "Fernando." Padewski is, if comparisons must be made, much more like the great Italian than the illustrious French tragedienne. Every tone seems imbued with life, and every place he plays seems to be with him the spontaneous utterance of the moment. And heavens! What a variety of tone color! What astounding pedaling! The finale of this concerto—mean the Liszt—he played at a tempo the like of which I have rarely if ever heard."

Mechanics Association.

Members are reminded of the usual monthly meeting this evening and it is hoped there will be a large attendance as new members are to be balloted for. Attention is called to the drawing school of the association. A large number of new charts and new appliances have been provided and it is hoped that there will be a large number of pupils who will desire to take advantage of the opportunity.

Edward Harrigan.

Edward Harrigan will be seen at Portland Theatre in "Old Lavender" next Monday and Tuesday. The Philadelphia Times says: "To most theatre-goers Old Lavender is a creation well known and well liked. The cast-down, drink-denied, heartbroken old man, who is still the gentleman, despite the poverty of his surroundings is a character in which Mr. Harrigan is seen at his best, while the local color of the scenes to which his pathetic degradation has brought him are thoroughly in touch with that unique vein that has always appealed to the public in the actor and more riotous plays in which the other has been seen here. The river front, with scenes and incidents peculiar to that locality, and the interior of the sailors' boarding house, were pictures true to life and duly appreciated. The company supporting Mr. Harrigan is a competent and pains taking one, old favorites and new-comers aiding him to round out the story in realistic and artistic fashion.

The Drummer Boy.

It was a large audience that gathered in City Hall last evening on the occasion of the first appearance of "The Drummer Boy" given under the auspices of Shepley Camp, S. of V., and the enthusiasm of the audience was wrought up to the highest pitch. "The Drummer Boy" is no stranger to Portland audiences, but it is very well arranged to please every taste and it has been carefully cast. Mr. A. F. Nail of Ohio, who assumes the part of Uncle Joe, the good negro, is very happy in the part and the honest laughter he evoked was proof of his ability. His son, Master Harry, was excellent as the Drummer Boy, Johnnie Howard. Mr. R. L. Whitcomb was very effective as Mart Howard. Leroy Sanborn filled the role of Farmer Howard most acceptably, and Mrs. Jas. H. Pike as Mother Howard, Miss Carrie Cook as Mrs. Mart Howard, Miss Edith Gribben as Miss Jennie Howard, and in fact every one who took part deserves much praise. The marches, tableaux and battle scenes were all admirably presented and were participated in by members of the posts, the camp, the relief corps and ladies' aid. The tableaux were among the best ever seen on City hall stage, and in several of them Miss Lizzie Pierce was a splendid goddess of liberty. In the last act Miss Henrietta D. Rice sang the "Vacant Chair" beautifully. Chandler's full orchestra furnished the music. This was the cast:

Farmer Howard, Leroy S. Sanborn
Mart Howard, R. L. Whitcomb
Mother Howard, M. M. Scott
Johnnie Howard, Harry Nail

WESTBROOK.

The president of the city council, together with the committee on public grounds and buildings, of the council, and the school committee, inspected the sanitary and ventilating equipment of the Bridge-street school building, with the view of formulating a report to submit at the special meeting of the city council Monday evening next. It was the mind of this committee that no temporizing means should be adopted, but that the building should be refitted with modern sanitary and ventilating apparatus and they will report to this effect to the council. If the council concurs with them, the apparatus will be put in at the November vacation.

About fifty members of Naomi lodge, D. R., of this city, were the guests of St. Julian lodge of Fryeburg last evening. The degree team of the former lodge was present and worked the degrees on several candidates.

Mrs. Edwin Richardson is visiting relatives in Boston. The Westbrook Manufacturing company are to put in an electrical generator at their plant so as to convey a portion of the power of the lower fall to mill number three at the upper fall. This will use the excess of power at the lower fall at the mill at the upper falls where the need of it has been greatly felt the past few months. This is the second plan recently formulated for using the power that has been going to waste along the Presumpscot. The waste of power at the dams above this city will undoubtedly, be transferred to the plants here, by means of electricity, in the near future.

Mrs. H. P. Libby is making a short visit with friends in Boston.

Mr. Harry Cobb, assistant teacher at the High school has resigned on account of the severe sickness of his mother.

A large delegation of Odd Fellows were present. The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful. The interment was at Mt. Pleasant cemetery.

SUPERIOR COURT.

BEFORE JUDGE BONNEY

Wednesday—George Rose vs. Alvin D. Sweetser.

An action to recover damages caused by leakage from a water pipe. Plaintiff lives at No. 11 Portland street and defendant owns a tenement close to it which he rented. Plaintiff claims that one of the defendant's pipes was in a defective condition so that a large quantity of water escaped and flowed into the plaintiff's cellar, and continued to do so from December 1, 194, to January 31, '95, rendering it unhealthy and causing sickness in the family. Defendant claims that the water did not come from any of his pipes, but came from an underground spring. After the evidence was out, by agreement of counsel, the case was reported to the law court, to determine the question of the defendant's liability, he being the landlord, and the acts complained of having been done by his tenant.

Louville H. Dyer and Albert E. Neal for plaintiff.

Dennis A. Meagher for defendant.

A Conscientious Tax Dodger.

Tax-collector S. C. Jordan of Casco brought Arthur Bowen of that town to the jail Wednesday for conscientious refusal to pay a poll tax of $3. Bowen, who is a young man without family, had been advised that it was not necessary to pay poll taxes. The selectmen decided to instruct Mr. Bowen.

Arthur C. Webster Gets Out of Jail.

A STIRRING CHASE AND RECAPTURE.

Webster Takes Advantage of a Visit of His Counsel to Make a Jump from a Window—He Injures Himself in Jumping.

For about two hours last evening there was a great stir in town, over the escape of Arthur C. Webster from the jail. Webster is the young man nineteen years of age, who confessed to having co-operated with Dominick E. Hamlin and George B. Morrow, in taking goods from the store of Skillin, Hawkes & Co. Webster, with Morrow and Hamlin, has been in jail awaiting the January term of the Superior court.

The circumstances of the escape are given as follows: Sometime previous to 6 p. m. Webster's counsel, Dennis A. Meagher, Esq., came to the jail to see him. As is customary in such cases, the prisoner was brought into the guard room and left with his counsel, while Turnkey Grover remained in the corridor or that vicinity. This guard room is really a sort of parlor, or office in the front of the jail building, at the left of the main entrance. The windows have never been barred. There is a basement beneath, so it is about twelve feet from the guard room windows to the ground beneath. The lower sash of the west window of the guard room can be raised a short distance, not over twelve or fifteen inches.

It was about six o'clock when Mr. Meagher finished his interview. Turnkey Grover says he heard Mr. Meagher, as he opened the door, from the guard room to the hall, say "all right." The turnkey at once stepped to the door, and was just in time to see Webster's shoes disappearing through the narrow opening made by raising the lower sash. Mr. Meagher said that after he had finished his interview with Webster, he started to the door and opened it to call the turnkey; and that as he did so he heard a noise behind him and turned in time to see Webster's coat tails vanishing out the window. Mr. Meagher says that he shouted to the turnkey, who was at once on the spot.

Once out of the window, there was, about a foot below a narrow ledge which enabled the prisoner to drop the feet, the ground in such away as to strike on his feet. He had hardly lighted before Turnkey Grover had run out the front door, down the steps, and was after him. The closely pursued prisoner ran around the corner of the jail, across the yard, and then jumped the fence on the side towards the dump. Turnkey Grover vaulted the fence right after him, and away near the foot down to the dump. When near the foot of Franklin street, Mr. Grover tripped and fell. This enabled Webster to vanish in the darkness.

There was at once great activity on the part of the officials. Sheriff Plummer at once detailed deputies to watch the bridges and highways leading from the city, informed the officials of nearby and distant places, and got the aid of Marshal Trickey and the police force.

The dump was searched faithfully and minutely. The officers crawled under the lumber piles and mills, searched the dust heaps, etc. But nothing more was found of Webster until about half past nine o'clock, when the fugitive was caught in a curious way.

It seems that about the time that Turnkey Grover lost sight of him, Webster ran behind C. S. Bates's ice house, where he found Edward Stevens's punt into this he jumped, and paddled his way to the government channel with a piece of board. Then he struck across to the flats which lie east of the estates of Messrs. J. S. Ricker and M. M. Bailey in Deering. The shoals of the flats compelled him to leave his boat and get ashore afoot.

He was forced to leave his boat because of the near presence of a fishing boat called the "Ark," in which were City Messenger Macgowan, David Calhoun, Charles A. Rounds and Alfonso Sampson. He left his boat within twenty feet of them, and they, seeing it, got it and towed it back to its place. They also saw the tracks of someone in the mud where the boat was used. As soon as they heard of Webster's escape they mistrusted who had used the boat.

After leaving the boat poor Webster found his misery just begun. He had to go a mile across the dark flats, the water varying from a few inches to several feet in depth. By wading and swimming he at last managed to reach the shore wet and dispirited. He said that when he got into the cold water he wished himself back in jail.

After landing he, struck the Portland and Rochester truck at Woodford's, and started along. But he was so wet and cold that when he got along to Wilson's stable he went in for shelter. He represented that he had been thrown out and had hurt his knee; and wished to be sent in to Dr. Freeman E. Small's in the city. So a team was hitched up and he was driven into the city.

Dr. Small was ill, and Webster took possession of his office, and wrote a note to Mr. Ross, the barber, asking the latter to send him a suit of dry clothes. Mr. Ross directed the messenger to take the note to Mr. George Round's stepfather of Webster. Young Edward Webster, brother of the fugitive, received the note, and recognizing the handwriting, read it at once.

Edward Webster without hesitation, took the note to Marshal Trickey, and the two at once proceeded to Dr. Small's office, where they found the fugitive. Marshal Trickey took him at once to the jail, where he was gladly received. There is no doubt that he was rather thankful to be recaptured. Indeed, he expressed his pleasure when he found that he was recaptured. The break made by young Webster seems to have been ill-advised, since he had not much to gain. He has turned state's evidence and there seems to be an impression that he will be dealt with lightly. If he had gotten away, Hamlin and Morrow might have profited more, as he is the main witness against them.

THE STATE SENATORSHIP.

Mr. Edward Kimball of Bridgton is a Candidate.

Mr. Edward Kimball of Bridgton, is a candidate for the Republican nomination for state senator from the northern portion of Cumberland county. Mr. Kimball was a candidate four years ago, when Mr. Cook was nominated; and will be a candidate again this year.

BURROWS' SCREEN FACTORY.

It Will Not Be Removed to Bonny Eagle as Stated.

Mr. E. T. Burrows said yesterday that he does not contemplate the removal of his extensive plant from Portland to Bonny Eagle. Mr. Geo. H. Davis and himself bonded the water power of the Saco River at Bonny Eagle, in order to develop the lumber business in that section. They talk of building a pulp mill there, and in one little ravine close by there are six million feet of spruce that can be utilized. He says his new venture will not effect his Portland plant in the least.

A Great Harvest Year.

Unless estimates are grossly at fault or some untoward event occurs, the harvest of 1895 will be among the greatest this country has ever seen. Corn, wheat and fruit are yielding abundantly, and as these are the crops upon which the farmer depends largely for his returns, it is not strange that he is contented and happy, and will, therefore, be able to come to town to see Lillian Kennedy in "A Midnight Frolic."

Sarah H. Smith, of Pineville, Bucks County, Pa., says: "I have had rheumatism for the past twenty-five years, and it was chronic when I began using MUNYON'S RHEUMATISM CURE. I had tried every remedy that was suggested, but none of them did me any good. I suffered a great deal, and was in almost constant pain. Finally I began to use MUNYON'S RHEUMATISM CURE. In a short time I was entirely cured, and have not had the slightest symptom since."

Professor Munyon has a separate remedy for each disease; for instance, the Kidney Cure contains the medicinal principles which act upon the kidneys, and restore their functions to the normal condition; so with every disease, one remedy for each disease; no cures are claimed, and here is where Professor Munyon has solved the problem of rapid and permanent cure. From any druggist you may obtain "Munyon's Guide to Health" free, and his Improved Homeopathic Remedies, at most 25 cents a bottle. You can then cure yourself and save a doctor's bill.

WONDERFUL TAJ MAHAL.

India's Tomb of the Famous Empress of Shah Jehan.

(From Harper's Weekly.)

The central point of attraction to the stranger at Agra must always be the wonderful building known as the Taj Mahal at once the tomb and the monument of the Empress of Shah Jehan. It is said that on the spot where the tomb now stands there was once a sort of summer palace where the Great Mogul and his family spent part at least of the year, as it was the favorite residence of his wife, to whom he was devotedly attached. Here, the story goes she had asked him to build her the most beautiful palace ever yet constructed as a memorial of his affection for her and of their happiness together. Before anything was done to carry out this design however the beloved Empress died leaving the Emperor inconsolable for his loss. What he could not do for the living wife he determined still to do for her memory and the result was the erection of the famous tomb which remains still the most beautiful example of its class in the world. The building stands on the opposite bank of the Jumna from the palace and city Agra and is a dome of white marble rising from among the luxuriant vegetation of the surrounding garden form the most dazzling object that can well be conceived as seen from almost any part of the city but especially from the palace itself.

No estimate has ever been formed of the wealth lavished on the building but that it must have been enormous no one who examines the almost incredible beauty and elaborateness of the workmanship, and the rare and in some cases almost priceless character of the material used in its construction, can possibly doubt. The actual execution of the work employed a host of the skilled laborers obtainable in the Eastern world for twenty-two years, and when it is remembered that the building is small compared with most of those on which emperors have lavished their treasures, some idea of the intricacy of its design and the beauty of its execution may be formed.

The gateway by which we entered the enclosure itself prepared us somewhat for the splendor of the building within. Like every part of the building, and its surroundings, this gateway is constructed of the purest white marble polished to the highest perfection of which the stone is capable, while the carving and designs embossed on the surface are remarkable for the elegance and grace of their conception as well as for the perfection of their execution. It is a very easy matter to occasion the mind to the idea that this work, hardly less perfect to-day than it was 250 years ago, can have stood exposed to the weather all those years. Some-thing, no doubt, is due to the climate and, more, perhaps, to the exquisite polish of the surface, which has fitted it to resist the weather to the best advantage.

It is, however, on the interior of the mausoleum that Eastern art, with all its wealth of patient industry, has lavished the best of all it had to offer. The whole interior blazes to-day exactly as it did when first erected, with the perfect reproduction in polished stone of every leaf and flower with which nature has adorned the Indian peninsula. And not one shade of the exquisite color is produced by any pigment. If a single flower demanded a score of tints to reproduce its perfect beauty, the coloring was obtained by the use of a score of different stones without regard to their rarity or value. Nor is the effect injured by marks of joining. Hardly anything so perfect as this has been achieved in modern times. The art and not nature had produced the dazzling effect. But it is hopeless to attempt to give any adequate idea of the consummate work art, which stands, and no doubt will stand, unrivaled as the highest example of unwaried art supported by unbounded resources.

A Lively Runaway at Westbrook.

Yesterday afternoon, Mr. Harry Cobb, a teacher in the High school at Westbrook was out driving a colt in that city. The colt proved to be a very lively animal. While going up Bridge street, just as he approached Main street, a rein broke and the colt started off at the top of his speed. He turned the corner of Main street and took to the sidewalk, throwing Mr. Cobb out and bruising him considerably. The colt ditched the wagon and clearing himself dashed on up the sidewalk at break neck speed. He finally fell and was secured. He was considerably bruised and injured.

The street was filled with people, and it looked at one time as if somebody would be seriously injured, but fortunately no one was run down.

How They Took It.

The Democrats were long faces yesterday. There was absolutely nothing except Tammany's victory to bring joy to the soul of the "unaffiliated." Most of them attributed the defeat of Gorman to Cleveland and his followers, and nearly all, except the office holders condemned the President.

A prominent Democrat and eloquent orator said to a PRESS man: "When this man Cleveland gets through with the Democratic party it will need no executor or administrator. There will be only enough left to require the service of an undertaker, and he will have to hustle to find any remains."

IF IT IS GORHAM, IT IS GENUINE.

Of course; that goes without saying. But is it Gorham? Is it stamped with the Lion, the Anchor, and the Letter G?

Don't buy so much as a Teaspoon for Solid Silver, unless it bears this doubt-dispelling mark.

Portland School Houses.

The Board of Health yesterday morning reported to the Mayor that they had examined the cement drains of the Butler school house thoroughly. They found the pipe so far as examined to be whole. They found one line dry without cement and another leaking badly although laid in cement. They found one water conductor trap leaking, the joint being laid with cement when lead should be used.

They recommend that the cement drain be replaced by iron pipe and that the old water closets be taken out and modern ones put in. This work if undertaken, means the expenditure of $1000 or $2000. The Board of Health have not recommended the closing of the school, but this may become necessary if extensive work in the basement is begun.

The committee on Public Buildings and not the School Committee must undertake this work, if it is done. The cement drains will be replaced by iron pipe at once, but the question of new water closets will be considered.

Congress Square Church.

Dr. Blanchard requests his parishioners who were to confer with him with regard to the formation of a class for the study of American History, to meet him in the church (not the vestry) at two o'clock, instead of three, Saturday afternoon.

Tickets will be sold on go Nov. 14 and return not later than November 15 at $3.00. This will give all a chance to visit the Mechanics Fair, now in session at little cost.

AFTER KIDD'S GOLD.

A Strange Disappearance of a Harpswell Man.

There was a strange story of disappearance along the shore, reported at the office of J. W. Trefethen yesterday by parties from the coast. According to the story, some three years ago Charles Hodson of Winthrop, rather recent graduate from Hebron Academy, and regarded as a very bright and promising young man, fell sick, and as a result of that sickness and of a specie of mental depression that followed, was forced to give up his studies for the time, and was directed to stay out of doors as much as possible. It was believed that time and much exercise would restore his mental and physical health to the fullest degree and enable him to resume his studies once more. He was about 30 when taken sick, and since then has been a frequent visitor to the Maine coast line, among other places being in the habit of visiting at the house of Mr. Samuel Toothaker at East Harpswell, where he was always sure of a warm welcome. He developed a great love for the sea, and became an expert in handling a boat.

Just before the storm of last week young Hodson left his home in Winthrop and went to the house of Mr. Toothaker. His visit was unexpected, but the members of the family were glad to see him, and has always seemed perfectly at home, and rather better than usual. During the evening he talked with the members of the family regarding the islands of that vicinity and especially of Mark Island, and the next morning said to William Toothaker: "Will, I want to go to Mark Island."

That rather surprised Toothaker, as Mark Island is about 12 miles from their place and is uninhabited. There are no buildings on the island, but only a monument.

"What do you want to go there for, Charlie?" he asked.

"You won't tell if I tell you?"

"No."

"I'm going to dig up the gold that is buried there."

His friend was surprised, and asked him to explain what he meant, and young Hodson said that he dreamed that he when alone to Mark Island, an island with a monument, but without a house, and that he dug up a lot of gold buried there by Capt. Kidd.

Young Toothaker rather laughed at his fancy, but his belief in his dream was too strong to be shaken in that way, and he went allowed to take the boat.

This was the morning of the storm, and as will be recalled it came upon sudden. Hodson did not return that night, but little was thought of it. He had to sail or row some 12 miles from Toothaker farm, to Mark Island, while he would have been forced to have crossed only about two miles of water to have reached the mainland straight from the island, and it was not thought at all strange that he did not attempt to return, and the same held good during the two following days, and even then knowing that he was somewhat erratic in his movements, little was thought of a further delay for a day or two.

Up to Tuesday morning, no news had been received of the missing man and there were then grave fears entertained that his search for the elusive gold buried by Capt. Kidd, had resulted in his death. It was then feared that he might have been blown off to sea, or mistaken the distance and the location of Mark Island have himself ventured too far out. He may be still on some one of the smaller islands or have been picked up and taken into some port and not yet been reported.

Portland Not to Have a Monopoly of the Cattle Trade.

Secretary Morton has not yet reached a formal decision upon the application of the Boston Chamber of Commerce for the shipment of Canadian cattle from that port, but he is strongly disposed to grant the request, and will probably do so. The only port from which shipments are now allowed is Portland, which was selected as the nearest point for the Canadian railways. Some obstacles have been suggested to Secretary Morton by the bureau officers of the department to adding Boston on the list of ports, but the Secretary is not disposed to throw any obstacles in the way of legitimate commerce, and if it appears that considerable shipments are likely to take place from Boston he believes that they should be permitted. It is anticipated that the permission of shipment from Boston will result in applications from other ports, but these will be considered on their merits.

The American ship Granite State, went ashore on the coast of Cornwall, near Penzance, Tuesday, while bound from Falmouth for Swansea, and has been completely broken up by the seas.
